

The Adam Smith Seminar – SS2008

VMP 5, Room 0079, Tuesdays, 18:00–20:00

The Adam Smith Seminar is an interdisciplinary research seminar for the presentation of new work in economics, politics, and philosophy. The Atmosphere is open and informal.

- 01.04.08 Martin Leroch, University of Hamburg
Culture at Work: Modelling Cultural Differences in the Effectiveness of Incentives
- 08.04.08 Alain Marciano, Université de Reims Champagne Ardenne
Hume's theory of human nature
- 15.04.08 Christian-Mathias Wellbrock, University of Hamburg
Publicistic quality in media markets
- 22.04.08 Johannes Bruder, University of Hamburg
Corporate Diversification and the Product Market Effects of Bankruptcy Costs
- 29.04.08 Urs S. Brandt, University of Southern Denmark, Odense
What can facilitate cooperation: reciprocity, fairness, norms, trust or punishment?
- 06.05.08 Tomas Kavaliauskas, Vytautas Magnus University at Kaunas, Lithuania
Business Ethics and Immanuel Kant's Categorical Imperative, A Case Study of Philanthropic Merck&Co
- 20.05.08 Matthew Braham and Martin van Hees, University of Groningen
Responsibility Gaps
- 27.05.08 David Hojman, University of Liverpool
Chilean wine: Who is successful, who is not, and why?
- 03.06.08 Karl Sörenson, Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm
The Fallacy of Deterrence
- 10.06.08 René van den Brink, Free University, Amsterdam and Frank Steffen, Univ. of Liverpool
Axiomatizations of a Positional Power Score and Measure for Hierarchies
- 17.06.08 Andreas Nohn, University of Hamburg
Randomly Matched Bargaining in Social Networks
- 24.06.08 Nicola Maaser, University of Hamburg
Lobby Cartels and the Status Quo
- 01.07.08 Jens Tiedemann, University of Hamburg
One Thing at a Time: Efficient Agendas for Multi-Issue Bargaining
- 08.07.08 Tobias Langenberg, Freie Universität Berlin
Product Durability in Markets with Consumer Lock-in